PAH – Intern, Dr Ross Fowler

What I was looking for was for a hospital that offered me a wide range of clinical settings which would give me more of a comprehensive intro to medicine and surgery.

My internship provided me with the exposure to the everyday common pathologies as well as exposure to the more complex and interesting cases.

There's plenty of direct contact with leading physicians and surgeons and heaps of teaching by other specialties.

You have more responsibility on the wards here and it gives you an opportunity to apply all the concepts that you've learned.

The learning here was always coupled with constant clinical support and some really, really useful clinical skills workshops.

The most important thing that I wanted to do when I started working was to enjoy myself and I was able to do that with the junior doctor society that they have here.

A medical education unit that's solely there to look after you guys, as well as further training for what you already do on the wards.

There's plenty of networking that goes on here and mentoring by all the consultants and it's great for career progression.

You really get the feeling at the PA that you're an important member of the team and not just a junior doctor.

At PA, our Interns want enjoyment as much as training. We have an exceptional medical staff common room and study areas as well as social events organised through the society.

Most importantly, Princess Alexandra Hospital can assure you that you will never be lost in the system. We are here to help you as much as you are here to help the patients.
